

May 13 Special Day For Call-Post Staff

Thursday, May 13, 1976, is probably just another uneventful day to most people, but to the editor, manager and staff of The Columbus CALL & POST, it is a very significant and unforgettable day.

May 13, 1976 is a special day to us, for it was on this very date 14 years ago that The Columbus CALL & POST was introduced to and reluctantly accepted by a skeptical Columbus public.

Now, as we observe our 14th birthday, it is indeed heartening to report that we have obviously overcome that agonizing hostility and enjoy the confidence and support of those who once mistrusted us.

In our first edition and in subsequent issues, we pledged editorially, to give Columbus the finest weekly newspaper it had ever had. We also committed ourselves to work aggressively for equal justice and humane treatment of all people and to expose wrongdoing wherever we found it.

Moreover, we promised to use our influence to gain support for public officials whom we deem worthy of trust, and to vigorously oppose those who seek to use the political platform to entice votes, then betray the confidence placed in them by the voting public.

We offered our unsolicited support to all churches, regardless of denominations; to every civic, social and all organizations of good intent in The CALL & POST circulation area. The volume of articles appearing in each edition dramatically proves that we have fulfilled that commitment beyond expectations.

So, while we proudly, but humbly hail the 14th anniversary of The Columbus CALL & POST, we are cognizant of the salutary fact that we could not have survived without the unselfish support of our readers, advertising clients and the public in general.

To each and everyone of you, we are indeed grateful and sincerely hope that they share with us our enthusiastic observance of our 14th anniversary. With this continued support, financially and morally, there is no question that The CALL & POST will live to enjoy many more birthdays, hopefully in a more abundant fashion.

Saturday Session Slated For Desegregation Trial

By MICKI SELTZER

The NAACP will bring two more of its expert witnesses to the stand as the Columbus school desegregation trial continues this week.

Resuming on Thursday after a three day recess, the trial will run through Saturday, this week at the Federal Building, 85 Marconi Bl.

Expected to take the stand on Thursday, following the completion of testimony by Robert Carter, is Dr. Martin Sloan, an attorney with a private anti-housing discrimination agency in Washington, D.C.

Dr. Robert L. Green, a psychologist and dean of the College of Urban Development at Michigan State University, is scheduled as an expert witness for the NAACP on Friday.

"Green will speak to the effects of segregation on society and on black children and their ability to get along in society," according to NAACP Attorney Richard Stein.

"Sloan," Stein said, "is a housing expert who has been working since the '60's with the Federal government on committees to alleviate discrimination in housing."

"He knows the housing situation, how the federal government has contributed to segregation and how banking institutions ethnic groups in the early years.

Murder Trial Postponed

The aggravated murder trial of 17 year old Donald Eugene Banks, slated to open last Monday in Franklin County Common Pleas Court, was postponed to "mid-June."

Banks, 488 Reynolds Ave., is charged with the fatal shooting of Edward Peters, a 55 year old mechanical instructor at Central High School last Jan. 28.

Assistant County Prosecutor James O'Grady, said the case was postponed at the request of defense attorneys M.S. Ramonoff and G. Ayers Jr.

have contributed. He ties the picture together as far as discriminatory practices in housing and shows their connection to governmental action.

Another possible witness this week will be C.L. Dumaree, retired deputy superintendent of schools. Robert Carter, whose testimony had not been completed when court adjourned last Friday, reported to Dumaree while serving as executive director for administrative services.

Carter is presently on leave from the school system to attend graduate school. His testimony will resume on Thursday.

Carter is one of the key school board witnesses in the case since he was responsible for school attendance boundaries from 1964 to 1975.

Another key witness on the stand last week was Dr. Karl E. Taeuber of the Institute for Research on Poverty, University of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis. Taeuber has testified for the NAACP at over 12 desegregation trials.

A sociologist, Taeuber, has developed a formula for measuring the degree of segregation in a city or school. The formula, called a segregation index, uses a scale of 0 to 100 with 0 meaning no segregation and 100 meaning complete segregation.

A city would have 0 segregation, according to his formula, if every city block had the same percent of non-whites as that which existed in the city. A segregation index of 90 would mean that 90 percent of the black population would have to be moved in order to obtain an index of 0.

Taeuber said the segregation index for Columbus in 1970 was 84.1. He said that while some communities across the nation have had a drop in residential segregation, Columbus has had very little change. If it continued at the same rate, he said, it would be 50 decades (500 years) before there was a substantial drop.

Discussing the difference between the dispersal pattern of ethnic groups and that of blacks, Taeuber said in the early 1900's the black population was segregated to the same degree as the European ethnic groups.

Now, however, the black population has a higher level of segregation than organized groups in the black community were pleading for more residential dispersal, Taeuber said, indicating they were concerned about the concentration and this was not a free choice.

Other indications, he said, were surveys, which showed a majority of the black population preferring a racially mixed neighborhood, and evidence as to who lives where.

The financially better off lead the movement away from the concentrated areas and live in racially mixed areas at the fringe, he said. The black housing market is like the white, with the well off seeking

Woman, 45, Faces Hearing In Fatal Knifing Of Mate, 64

A 45 year old woman charged with the fatal stabbing of her common law husband faces a Friday, May 14 preliminary hearing on an aggravated murder count, while police are still seeking a partially identified man who reportedly caused the serious eye injury of an Eastside man via a shotgun.

S. 17th St., was charged with murder Sunday for allegedly stabbing 64 year old Walter Lee Chaney, of the same address, once in the upper chest with a kitchen knife.

Police said the couple became involved in a heated argument shortly before 11 p.m. Saturday night. As the argument ensued, Grey apparently went to the kitchen for a knife and returned to the bedroom area, knifing the victim slightly above the heart, detectives stated.

Reports state that Chaney, who died shortly after the wound was inflicted, was found lying face down in an upstairs bedroom. Grey was reportedly alone when officers arrived. Homicide detectives revealed that Chaney was stabbed by the same woman during a disturbance last year.

Homicide detective Lt. Richard Hartman said Grey was also involved in a 1968 manslaughter. Bond for Grey was set at $2,000 surety. To assure her presence in the courtroom, Judge Leo P. Stark tacked on a $3,000 appearance bond. The suspect is currently being held in the Women's Correctional Institute.

In a less serious, but more brutal type of assault, authorities are currently tracking down a suspect only identified as "Lonzo" by his reported aggravated assault victim.

Teacher Busted On Vice Count Loses School Job

By C.A. BRYCE JR.

A high school physical education teacher whose April arrest for soliciting for prostitution was revealed on Page One of last week's CALL-POST has apparently resigned her teaching position.

In a telephone interview last Friday, May 7, Theodore H. Turner, assistant superintendent in charge of personnel said, "Miss V'Ann Ryther is no longer employed by the Columbus Public Schools."

Ryther, 23, of 6142 Northgate Rd., was arrested last month at a

Columbus motel for allegedly soliciting an undercover vice squad officer.

Turner would not comment on whether Ryther's leaving was voluntary or if it was in any way related to the CALL-POST article which hit the newsstands the day of her departure.

In an earlier conversation, however, Turner explained that Ohio law stipulates that teachers may be fired or suspended only by official action of the board of education. The last official meeting of the Columbus board was held two days prior to Ryther's departure and no such action was taken.

It is therefore assumed that she submitted her resignation, although Turner would neither confirm nor deny that assumption.

Black OSU Trustee Objects To Awarding Degree To Moynihan

After a 20-minute debate, Ohio State University's Board of Trustees voted 7-2 Friday (5/7) to confer an honorary degree on Daniel Patrick Moynihan.

Moynihan is professor of government at Harvard University and last year served as the U.S.

permanent representative to the United Nations. Ohio State announced last December that he would be its spring commencement speaker on June 11.

At the trustees' meeting, Mrs. Patricia D. James of Cleveland opposed awarding the honorary doctor of laws degree to Moynihan, who was one of five persons recommended to the board for honors.

She said that black Americans had been "victimized by the rhetoric and mythmaking which has emanated from the articulate Mr. Moynihan's reports and writings," citing as a case in point his 1965 report, "The Negro Family: A Case for National Action."

Fictions woven from the fabric of Moynihan's "professed" good intentions," she said, "have become fact in the public mind and have damaged Negro causes."

Taeuber cited 1970 census bureau statistics in relating that among white, low income families about 25 to 30 percent in Franklin County lived outside the city and the percent increased as income moved up.

In white families with incomes of $10,000 or more, 47 percent lived outside the city while only six percent of black families with comparable incomes lived outside the city.

The black community with the highest income is less likely to live outside the city than the white family with a low income, Taeuber noted.

Asked about discrimination affects the housing location of blacks and whites, Taeuber discussed racial discrimination which occurs through action by federal agencies, local housing authorities, banks, rental agencies and realtor practices.

Zeroing in on the effects of school board decisions on housing patterns, Lucas asked Taeuber to read from a 1938 FHA underwriting manual which said that an incompatible racial element at the school makes the neighborhood far less desirable than otherwise.

Taeuber said that when a black faculty and principal are put into a school as a few black students come into the area this serves as a signal that the school authorities expect the school to become black. This then indicates and confirms that the area is going to become all black, he said.

Asked about the student segregation index for Columbus schools, Taeuber said in 1975 it was 70 for elementary schools, 56 for junior highs and 54 for senior highs.

In cross-examination, School Board Attorney Samuel Porter brought out that a book by Taeuber lists Columbus as having the second largest degree of annexation in a list of 24 cities in the country. Asked if the segregation index is reduced or increased when an all white area is annexed, Taeuber said it is increased.

Following up on this, Lucas later asked Taeuber what effect annexation has on the segregation index. Taeuber said the effect is very slight, changing the index by only about one point.

In other questioning, Porter asked Taeuber if the school segregation index is 20 points below the housing segregation index, wouldn't he agree that the school system is substantially more integrated than the housing patterns.

Taeuber said the two could not be compared. Taeuber did agree with statements by Porter that you can't put full responsibility on any one agency and that the development of segregation would depend on a myriad of circumstances.

In questioning of Robert Carter, which will continue on Thursday, the NAACP last week attempted to bring out how segregation was maintained by the school board in a number of instances where students were assigned to schools outside their neighborhood attendance area.

Carter was questioned extensively Friday about streets in a 1959 school district directory which were assigned to Broadleigh School but were not the Broadleigh vicinity. NAACP officials say white students were brought in from all over the city to the school, which served the overflow of seventh graders from Eastmoor Junior High.

Carter was asked by Lucas to locate on a city map approximately 15 streets which were assigned to the school. He was unable to locate most of them.

Lucas asked Carter about intact busing, where a teacher and class (in some cases a black teacher and black class going to a white school) were temporarily transferred to another school where they stayed as a separate unit.

Carter said intact busing was used in elementary schools to relieve overcrowding, as an alternative to placing extended or double sessions in elementary schools.

He said they tried not to bus students for more than one year but conceded under questioning that this sometimes continued for several years.

Asked why these students were sometimes required to eat lunch separately, he said there were times when this may have happened for administrative reasons.

Carter was asked about an administrative decision to give the board two options in selecting boundary lines last year for Innis and Cassidy elementary schools. The board selected an option that resulted in less racial balance, saying it opposed the other option because it called for the pairing of the two schools, making one a primary center and the other an intermediate center.

Asked why the administration didn't make a recommendation to the board, as it customarily does, Carter said they did not because the primary-intermediate center deviated from the general pattern.

Is not preventing increased segregation a matter that should be an educational consideration? Lucas asked.

Yes, Carter answered. Carter was also asked about optional attendance zones, about options presented to the board in selecting boundary lines for independence, Walnut Ridge and Eastmoor senior highs, about the assignment of black principals to black schools, about the determination on school capacity and about areas outside of the school district that are serviced by the Columbus school system.

Other testimony last week ranged from housing practices to state board of education policy.

Bennett Dickerson, an area real estate broker, testified that he lost $8000 as a result of the purchase of a house in 1946 which was returned to its previous white owner because of a restrictive covenant.

Dickerson also testified on realtor practices and obstacles faced by blacks attempting to purchase property outside of areas which were agreed to be black areas.

Also testifying last week was Dorothy Lenart, education specialist for the Columbus Urban League.

Lenart reported on a school board decision not to apply for federal funds which were available for desegregation purposes. She said a coalition of community groups was looking into the possibility of applying for supplementary funds but was advised by a state department of education official not to do so because of the school board decision not to apply.

Lenart also testified on an April 1967 proposal by the Columbus Urban League for integrating Columbus schools.

Lucien Wright, director of the department of human relations for the Columbus Public Schools, testified that in 1943, when he became principal of Felton Elementary School, an all white faculty was changed to an all black faculty.

Other witnesses last week included Arthur Boudin, chief of the office of equal education opportunities for the state department of education, Donald Pierce, former president of the Columbus Education Association, Ruth Schildhouse, member of the State Board of Education, Edward J. Cox, attorney, and Myron Seifert, historian for the Columbus Board of Education.

Ever since 1934, it has been the No. 1 showcase for black oriented entertainers.

At the Apollo, the great performers have been discovered, nurtured, featured and starred, including the giants who can be identified by one name like Sammy, Flip, Aretha, Isaac, Dionne and numerous others. And audiences have been attracted at affordable prices and encouraged to voice their approval of those deserving of making it and their rejection of those obviously faking it.

Such has been the place of the Apollo in the com-

Sights and Sounds

By W. HARVARD (BUBBLES)
HOLLOWAY

Seldom does a week go by that I don't receive a letter of appeal from inmates of Ohio's Correctional Institutes. Often, my black brothers in Chillicothe write for help for others on death row in other prisons. Sandra M. Lockett, according to prisoners in Chillicothe, is sentenced to die and has been on death row for years for a crime they say they can prove she did not commit.

To write, and extremely interesting to me, is that none of the letters I receive is for help to the writer or groups such as Black Culture and History Group. It's always for someone else. And I like that.

However, the following letter from an inmate at Chillicothe is of a different nature and I feel that some of my readers may be affected by its contents. Please don't stop now, continue reading:

TAX SUPPORTED INSTITUTIONS OR BANANA REPUBLICS?

By PAUL TA JARI GREENLEAF EL

As America's prisons slowly, but inexorably, become predominantly black, more and more blacks who visit loved ones and relatives confined in the world's largest, stuffed-to-the-gills, penal system, are expressing alarm over a disturbing phenomena that is growing with leaps and bounds...

Black visitors to the hundreds of prisons, reform schools, juvenile homes and training schools dotting America, north, south, east and west, find themselves greeted and treated with increasing contempt and disrespect by overbearing, arrogant white institution employees...

Black women make up the majority of nonwhite visitors to the nation's institutions...

With alarming, disgusting frequency, they find themselves the outraged victims of contemptuous, insulting and surly behavior, which might include an embarrassing frisk, accompanied by equally embarrassing questions fired at them by rude, poorly trained institution employees...

Foodstuffs, packages and other gifts are subjected to a brutal ransacking search that would shame a bomb squad looking for an explosive device in the Rose Room of the White House...

Lovely prepared pies, cakes and other food gifts are mauled, mashed, torn apart and otherwise subjected to rough handling in a search for possible contraband...

Complaints about damaged gifts or ruined foodstuffs are met with a sullen, "I'm only doing my job" reply...

In contrast, white women, who make up the majority of Caucasian visitors to the nation's institutions, are trustingly waved through the gates, their packages and gifts seldom even given a second glance...

The presumption underlying such a dual standard of treatment sounds hauntingly familiar; everyone knows, the saying goes, that black people are always carrying something they shouldn't be, like guns and straight razors, so black women are more apt to attempt to smuggle contraband into an institution than their white sisters...

Rare indeed is the instance when an outraged black visitor is able to find an institution superintendent, or managing officer, on the premises when they wish to lodge a complaint about some particular instance of offensive, insulting behavior they've suffered at the hands of arrogant institution employees...

Black visitors who are advised to put their complaints in letter form to the superintendent or managing officer usually receive a curt reply to their letters, containing the explanation:

"As the superintendent of this facility, it is at my discretion that certain security procedures are followed..."

Which brings me to the point of this article...

Are the nation's tax supported institutions turning into Penal Banana Republics ruled over by autocratic superintendents whose "I AM THE BOSS, AND ANYTHING I SAY GOES" attitude is responsible for the contempt and disrespect shown to black visitors by poorly trained, bad mannered institution employees?

This writer is cognizant of the fact that contraband is, and has been, smuggled into institutions. Also, this writer is aware of the need to prevent the flow of contraband into any institution...

But, to subject black visitors to rude, offensive behavior under the cloak of checking for contraband, while at the same time, trustingly waving white visitors through the institution gates, is an inexcusable, disgusting practice...

Security checks for possible contraband should be conducted in a courteous, thoughtful manner. Institution employees who seem unable, or unwilling, to show respect towards ALL VISITORS, black, as well as white, should be removed from areas where their rudeness and insulting behavior can offend the visiting public...

Superintendents and managing officers of the nation's institutions should be reminded that they are PUBLIC SERVANTS, not autocratic rulers over some medieval satrapy; that their attitude to operate a TAX SUPPORTED institution does not include a sweeping mandate to condone, disregard, or overlook the offensive, insulting behavior of any institution employee towards any visitor...

In this age when task forces are whipped together to study or investigate just about anything, this writer urges the creation of a task force to study the very real problem of black visitors to the nation's institutions being the victims of offensive, disrespectful treatment at the hands of poorly trained, bad mannered employees. It's a pleasure to write about any big name entertainment coming to Columbus that's promoted by local, and in this case, area promoters. I can't help but feel that some of my articles are being rewarded, or to say the least, they are being read.

I wrote that to write this. Eritone Productions (they didn't want their names printed but I am doing it anyway), that's Bob Cook and Curtis Hardaway, are breaking their necks and maybe their pocketbooks also to present to Columbus on May 29 the fabulous Tyrone Davis and Little Johnny Taylor Show.

"So what," I heard someone say. Well, I have always maintained and preached that local promoters were advantages to the communities simply because any money made in the area stayed in the area, thereby giving others a chance to benefit from the recycling. Actually, the same principle is being used by Gov. Rhodes in his fervent effort to get Volkswagens to open a plant in Ohio. Eventually, some of that money will rub off on all of us.

Therefore, ladies and gentlemen, let the date down. Saturday, the 29th, at 9 p.m., at the Lausche Building, cabaret style, Tyrone Davis' 12 piece band will swing out for you and start your long Memorial weekend into an unforgettable one. And, who knows, way down the road you may get a couple of your bucks back just by backing the homey's in your hometown.

"I don't believe in advertising in the community or otherwise," he gruffly said as he got up from his reserved booth and madly stalked away, leaving me seated and dumbfounded.

This actually happened, readers, in the month of April, 1976, at Lieb's Restaurant at 1405 E. Livingston Ave.

Every seat at the bar was occupied. All blacks. I recognized most of them, as they did me. One invited me to have a drink with him. I did, explaining my mission to the seldom visited bar and restaurant. The Merry Makers Club, of which I belong, is celebrating its 50th anniversary and I was soliciting ads for the souvenir program booklet from merchants who catered to our community.

My mission brought a round of laughter from those who heard me. One said Bob Lieb wouldn't help any blacks anywhere. In fact, he continued, "he wouldn't let us in here if he could help it, but we got our rights now, 'ha ha' and he can't stop us."

Another said, "I've never seen a white man who so obviously hates blacks as that man does. Why he won't even speak to the people in his nightclub at Livingston and Nelson."

Well, what they told me evidently had some truth to it. For when I did get to see the giant proprietor, Robert Lieb, he answered my polite inquiry with exactly the 10 words stated previously and then left my presence.

Chuck Summers, Johnny Crump, Alphonso Willis and another man who flatly stated he didn't want his name mentioned because he didn't want the white man to know that he knew how he was, witnessed my encounter.

I really couldn't get angry with the blunt and nasty attitude of Mr. Lieb. After all, it's his business and his money and he lives and probably gives in his own lily white neighborhood.

But, partner, I told every black in hearing range at that bar what damn fools they were for spending one red cent in a place where they were not really wanted. Nothing but your fool money does he want.

"Well, Bubbles," the non identifying man said, "the whiskey is cheap in here and it's close to home, plus we ain't got no other nice place to go."

I left, mumbling, free schools and still dumb n—s.

Audience Lauds Fashion, Musical Gala By DeWilda

Columbus is applauding "Fashion Salutes the Wiz", the innovative fashion show and musical presented by fashion designer DeWilda on May 1, at Battelle Auditorium. Many are calling it one of the most entertaining shows they have ever seen.

From the moment the curtain parted and 15 Garrison Jr. High students from Baltimore, Md., sang and danced to "Everybody Rejoice" until the final standing ovation, it was declared an excellent production. Fifty students from Garrison, under the dynamic direction of W. David Hairston, presented excerpts from "The Wiz."

In presenting her 1976 fashion collection during the first half of the event, DeWilda and models once again paraded in designs and fabrics of exceptional beauty. Among the audience favorites were a lady's pantsuit in wine Italian double wood knit with a fitted jumpsuit and a long tubular coat slit from mid-calf to just below the hip on both sides.

Another favorite was a white satin evening gown topped with an off the shoulder silver knit tunic. Assisting DeWilda in modeling were Sam Pegram, Denise Porter, Dave Prince, Tom Ford, Patricia Ingle, and Ellie Billingslea.

Sprightly commentary was provided by James M. Chappelle. Young Winston White provided beautiful background piano music for modeling.

The fashions were a brilliant hue of garments in vibrant colors and all except Mr. Pegram's attire had been sewn by the designer to emphasize the home sewing trend. Many fabrics were from Leitch's Designer Fabrics Co., represented in Columbus by DeWilda.

After a brief intermission, the Garrison Jr. High students performed brilliantly in their own interpretation of the fabulous Broadway show "The Wiz," written and directed by their instrumental music instructor, W. David Hairston.

The audience sat spell-bound as they were transported into the magical land of Oz. Costuming, choreography, and lighting effects were tremendous. The audience was enthralled with the professionalism of the music, unable to believe that the performers were junior high students.

A total of 60 persons, including parents and chaperones, traveled from Baltimore for the event, and all were lavish in their praise of Hairston. They stated he has made Garrison the outstanding school in Baltimore musically. Hairston is a graduate of South High and Otterbein College.

Leading parts were outstandingly played as follows: Wadena Ridgell as Dorothy; Orlando Tucker as Scarecrow; James Jones as Tin Man; James Brown as Lion, and Instructor Hairston, as The Wiz.

The Wiz costume was a brilliant green cape and trousers trimmed with gold lame and black velvet. The half cape was trimmed with black fringe falling to the floor, and was worn with a huge green Afro and large green sunglasses. The costume was designed by DeWilda.

At intermission, the designer presented a check to the Isabelle Ridgeway Home which was accepted by Board of Directors member Atty. James Rickman. On Saturday preceding the show, the entire group were dinner guests of Rev. Leroy Jenkins at his cathedral in Delaware, O.

A special tour of Ohio State University was conducted for the Baltimore guests and they were entertained at a cast party at the Southern Hotel after the show by DeWilda.

The following persons served as hostesses at the show: Mrs. Margaret Nelson, Miss Ellen Chilton, Miss Janice Davis, Dayton; Mrs. Roxanne Burrus, and Mrs. Sherree Turner. Hosts were Paul Hairston, William Porter Jr., Tom Ford, Wayne Earley and Wallace Davis.

Wardrobe supervisor was Mrs. Mildred Slade. Models makeup was provided by Mrs. Mary Liggins of Mary Kay and jewelry was provided by Mrs. Karyn for Sarah Coventry. Hats were by Bede and Jesse.

The coordinating committee for this noteworthy event included Paul B. Hairston, William Porter Jr., Thomas Ford, Wayne Earley, Robert McCoy, Mrs. Charlotte Johnson, Mrs. Mildred Slade and DeWilda.

BENEFIT PRESENTATION - DeWilda, one of Columbus' most prominent fashion designers, presents James W. Rickman, with a check for the Isabelle Ridgeway Home during her musical/fashion revue held last Saturday evening at Battelle Auditorium. The presentation was made to Rickman, chairman of the board for the Ridgeway Home, upon completion of her fashion extravaganza section of the program. The modeling display was preceded by the interpretation of the Broadway hit musical "The Wiz" by 50 students from Garrison Jr. High School, under direction of W. David Hairston. MUSICAL RECEPTION - Here are some of the 50 students actors and musicians from Garrison Jr. High School in Baltimore, Md., who performed their own rendition of the Broadway musical, "The Wiz," in fashion designer DeWilda's musical/fashion revue last Saturday evening at Battelle Auditorium. The youths, who were touring the city Saturday afternoon stopped at the poshly-furnished mansion of Rev. Leroy Jenkins of Delaware, O., to perform both gospel tunes and some of their own favorites. Posing with the troupe is Rev. Jenkins' daughter Kathy (second row middle), who served as hostess in her father's absence. The group is under the direction of W. David Hairston, who is DeWilda's son. THE SPORT OF IT

No Violence, Just
MFSB At Their Best

MICHAEL HARRIS

Not to be one who'd want to miss a good free-for-all between softball teams brawling over a case of beer or five bucks a man, I decided to bail out of the bumper-to-bumper, bustling traffic that inched along the narrow thoroughfare of Franklin Park and see what the commotion was on the softball diamond.

Unfortunately for the violence-prone spectator, it wasn't one of those off-with-the-glove slugfests which have made professional hockey infamous. Alas, it wasn't the bully-like Philadelphia Flyers with baseball equipment. It was only the Mighty Fine Soul Brothers (MFSB) Softball team crucifying a hapless Columbus Technical Institute (CTI) squad 9-3; in the third inning and heckling them in the process.

The ringleader of this motley crew which tortured the puny CTI team was MFSB's 24 year old Coach David Anderson, walking the first baseline like an endless plank, while bantering pep cheers in the epitome of dugout bench chatter.

"Be the hitter, baby, be the hitter. Look what you got, see what it's all about." No doubt about it. A coach who inspires a team heckles the opponents, and even takes time to give batting hints to his players during a seldom mistake. "We can't get runs on high fliers."

Anderson, who only played baseball in junior high, but ran track at Linden-McKinley put the team together from scratch three years ago - buying the equipment uniforms and paying for the miscellaneous expenses out of his own pocket. Explaining how every member of the team went to Linden-McKinley and the organizational problems in the beginning, Anderson then stopped to accuse the losers. "I think they're waiting for darkness. It's the oldest trick in the book."

Regaining his sanity, while maintaining his baseball shrewdness, he then noted that his squad is the only black team competing in the Sunday Afternoon League out in Wolfe Park. "You can imagine how hard it was to get people together in the beginning," he confided, "and even now we're not getting any support from the (Linden) community."

But why, or a more specific question - "Is it worth it?"

"Well, I've always liked to be around people." Timeout for a brief argument over a deep fly down the left field line hit by second baseman Ronald Bosley. Eventually the CTI arguers weakened. Bosley gets the homer and Anderson, now the game's top trial lawyer, wins his case. Timeout for another heated discussion over a MFSB base runner who allegedly missed second base. No surprise.

Anderson, now a Supreme Court umpire, decides the verdict for his team despite smoldering dissension from CTI. "You know how a scrimmage game can be when you don't have an ump," he reasoned after his verbal victory.

While Anderson led the cheers, "Soul Brothers" Wayne Burton and Dwight Carter were busy tagging back-to-back homers. In come the substitutes and meanwhile, Anderson, dressed in a dark blue windbreaker, a green shower cap and rectangle-shaped glasses, begins a new cadence - shouting, pointing and ordering - "Be like you want to!"

End result: MFSB demolishes CTI 17-9 in five innings and Anderson exits the coaching box with hypertension, storing up his bantering for another day. "Look what you got, see what it's all about."

And the only violence which followed the game was an occasional temper flareup by drivers impatiently waiting in the snail's pace traffic of Franklin Park.

QUESTIONS AND... QUESTIONS

Though it's no secret that Ohio State halfback great Archie Griffin has officially signed with the Cincinnati Bengals for considerably less than the whopping offer made by a no-named Canadian League team, now the big question is whether Griffin will start, in place of whom, and in what capacity. That's right, issues, but no answers yet. Will he replace Lamar Parrish in returning punts and kickoffs, or what about taking over for Bobbie Clark rumored to have attitude problems? Is it the starting berth, the backup roles or the bench? Stay tuned for the continuing saga of questions and ... questions.

Three seniors on the East High track team are currently displaying consistent and commendable individual performances this season, despite the Tigers' overall lack of depth and injury problems, according to Head Coach Lee Williams.

The trio includes dashmen Dennis Francis and Michael Alston, and relay runner Terry Andrews. "These three seniors have scored heavily in all meets this season and have established some very respectable times in various events during the season," Williams noted.

Francis, a six foot, 160 pounder, is considered one of the top sprinters in the area, running strong legs in the 440, 880 and mile relays and the sprint medley. He has compiled such times as 9:9 in the 100 yard dash; 22:4 in the 220 and 49:8 in the 440 yard dash.

Alston, who has competed in all of the designated sprint and relay events, is considered a hard working athlete competing in his second track season. Williams commented that Alston, also a standout football player, has speed which hasn't as yet been tapped.

"If he had participated in track while in 10th grade and junior high school, it would be hard to tell just how fast he is," Williams lauded.

So far Alston has posted respective times of 9:9 and 22:4 in the 100 and 220 yard dashes, respectively and 49:8 in the 440 yard run.

Meanwhile, Terry Andrews, hampered by pulled hamstring most of the season, has been primarily used as a relay runner, but has reportedly turned in excellent performances in this role. Andrews, the twin brother of sprinter Gary Andrews, has anchored the 440 and 880 relay teams in which the Tigers have been in contention throughout their meets.

"The key to Terry's success is the fact that he's a very positive thinker regarding his track abilities and that he loves responsibility and pressure spots on relay teams," Williams reasoned. Timewise, Andrews runs a 10:00 100 yard dash; 22:9 in the 220 and 49:9 in the 440 yard event.

Williams added that the Tigers, who recently finished second in the first Hilliard Metric Invitational Meet, will be counting on continued improvement and consistency from all three in the upcoming city, district and state meets.

Capitol City Comets To Compete In 2nd Annual Track Meet May 15

The Capitol City Comets Track Club will compete in their second annual track and field meet Saturday, May 15, at Central High School. The meet will begin at 9 a.m. and will feature several out of town teams.

Some of the teams expected to compete are the Kettering Striders, of Dayton; the Lake Erie Comets; the New Image, from Pittsburgh, Pa.; the Motor City and Detroit Striders, both from Detroit, and several local clubs, including the Ohio Track Club, Scioto Track Club and the Buckeye Track Club. Tickets may be purchased at the gate.

The Central Ohio AAU Commission elected Ed Williams president during its annual meeting May 6. Williams is the first black to be elected by the Central Ohio AAU in its 53 year history.

Other officers selected during the confab were Jeanne Talley, coach of the Capitol City Comets Track Club, first vice president; Jim Jacobs of Jacobs Moving Co., third vice president, and Georgia Seifart, second vice president.

All new members will serve two-year terms and will represent the area Commission at the 89th Annual National Convention Oct. 9-16. According to Bill Cummings Jr., ongoing secretary of the local AAU Commission, the organization is the governing body for 21 sports played in 29 Ohio counties.

Former Ohio State football standout William M. Bell was among five ex-athletic directors recently inducted into the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics (NACDA). Bell, the first black to make the Buckeye varsity squad in 1928, later earned All-Big Ten and All-American honors. He later served as head football coach and athletic director at Ciallin University (1934-36).

GOOD MORNING JUDGE

Municipal Court Judges with, or closest to 20-20 vision have probably been assigned the eye-straining task of officiating over a stupendous May 13 criminal docket cluttered with almost every theft and dope-related case imaginable.

Undoubtedly, His Honor will use his/her judicial wisdom in deciding the fate of a 31 year old Bellaire, Ohio man booked on a dope charge after reportedly tipping off his suspicious mannerisms to police. Lawrence R. Wesley, was charged with possession of narcotics May 6 for allegedly concealing a small quantity of heroin in his hat.

Police said Wesley, who also listed his address as 1740 Franklin Ave., Columbus, was involved in a traffic violation with another person who was driving the vehicle. When asked for details of the incident and his identification, he reportedly began giving evasive answers and acting suspicious. Police revealed that he had no identification on his person.

Officers who searched the alleged junkie found a sharp edged object neatly hidden in the brim of his hat, according to the affidavit. Upon further investigation, police discovered it was an ornamental spoon attached to a plastic vial which contained a small packet of tan powder, later revealed to be heroin, police said.

Larry Vincent Johnson, 1340 King Ave., Apt. 107, will come to order this coming Thursday on charges of disorderly conduct, resisting arrest, and obstructing official business. Johnson, no age listed, was arrested April 27 for allegedly starting a ruckus with officers conducting their duty-sworn duties. Reports state that officers attempting to question Johnson's wife on a petty theft count said the suspect jumped in between the two parties telling police "they would have to get past him first."

Officers then preceded in bypassing Johnson by hauling the accused down to headquarters after a brief struggle. The judge is expected to pass along his judicial advice to Debra Pass, 4889 Kingshill Ave., Apt. 312, when she stands before the bench. The 18 year old woman is charged with forgery and falsification dating back to April 30. According to her affidavit, she was arrested after passing a bum $200 check on Ohio National Bank. When being slated, she reportedly told police she had never been fingerprinted or photographed. Police revealed she had been, under the assumed name of "Mary Smith."

His judgeship has so ordered Garry Wilson Woodrow, 1000 Neil Ave., Apt. A, to return to the courtroom with some legal assistance on his carrying a concealed weapon count. According to reports neighbors in the vicinity called police when shots were heard coming from Woodrow's apartment. Investigating officers said Woodrow's left front pants pocket was padded. Inside, a .22 caliber, eight-shot pistol was found. In his left pocket was a plastic bag full of .22 caliber hollow-point bullets. The affidavit disclosed.

Linda J. Warren, 1437 Hunter Ave., Apt. 10, will pay her enforcement tab for her illegal possession of hallucinogens conviction of April 6. Warren, 20, is due to fork over $50 and court costs, imposed by Judge Sydney Golden. It'll be an undeciding courtroom appearance for Wesley Bowers Jr., 27, charged with grand theft by deception. Bowers, 1587 Hawthorn Ct., is accused of using a credit card belonging to another and charging up to $165 in merchandise at Lazarus.

In a more strong-armed type of theft, 29 year old Rodney Starkey faces an armed robbery slate stemming from his alleged holdup on the Eastside. Starkey, whose last known address was 1615 Kenmore Rd., is accused of hijacking $1500 cash from a local store merchant in front of 773 E. Whittier St.

Phillip Broady, 1168 E. 26th Ave., will possibly be menaced more than verbally for his alleged bullish tactics against said complainant Carolyn Springs, 2314 Howey Rd. Springs said that Broady, 22, threatened her with death on April 26.

A 28 year old woman "hooked" on a soliciting for sexual activity count will now have a public session with His Honor during her preliminary hearing. The alleged prostitute, Rose Marie Mathis, 1098 E. 17th St., was picked up by a vice officer near Parsons Ave. and Main St., where she reportedly wagged the officer to perform some unnatural sexual acts.

The officer, who then revealed his true identity, said the woman attempted to escape causing a desperate scuffle. She was finally subdued when reinforcements arrived.

Bill Stickle, 2176 Riverdale Sq., has been summoned to appear for a hearing on his April 22 grand theft slate. The 24 year old suspect is accused of taking a citizens band radio from owner Wendell E. Crosley, 3227 Petzinger Rd.

Charles M. White, 1288 Puritan Ave. will rise and come forth when his name is uttered by the bailiff. Charged with receiving stolen property, the 20 year old is accused of having a digital clock, a black and white television, and a woman's full length fur coat in his unworthy possession.

Though free on a $1,000 appearance bond, 19 year old Willie E. Blair, 1115 Atcheson St., will revisit the high-formal confines of criminal court on his charge of aggravated burglary. The reportedly armed cat-burglar allegedly forced entry into the humble abode of Brenda Rogers at 781 Mt. Vernon Ave. on April 4. Rogers was reportedly home at the time.

Judges will be able to "take five" on Friday by handling a mediocre docket. Among those featured on the busy ledger is the case of "Jane Doe", or Edith L. Anderson, 338 E. 11th Ave. Anderson, 19, was booked for criminal damaging. Police said the girl was observed throwing rocks through business windows as she walked along W. Broad St. When accosted by officers, she reportedly would not give her name or any information to officers. Anderson was also given an assault rap for allegedly kicking police in the leg as she was being ID'd, according to her affidavit.

Meanwhile, a 61 year old man faces a sexual imposition charge for his alleged molesting of a 15 year old girl. Lucian Compton, 30 W. Third Ave., the accused is to acknowledge or disavow fondling the young girl's breasts. Bonnie Evans, 979 Campbell Ave., will explain her version of stealing narcotic drugs prescription blanks. Evans, 31, is said to have pilfered prescription blanks from Doctor's Hospital North on April 19.

In one of the more serious felonies posted on the day's sheet, a 35 year old native Italian faces two local charges of felonious assault and one count of criminal trespassing. Police said Reno Carila, 6013 Blue Spruce St., was warranted March 21 for the near fatal shooting of Romeo Sinij, 2406 Northwest Blvd. during a domestic disturbance. The misdemeanor charge was tacked on when Carila refused to leave the premises.

The charge is passing bad checks and William Harvey of Harvey and Jones Manhole Builders, 1701 Jonathan Dr., is the defendant scheduled to face the enforcement on that count. The affidavit was filed when Harvey allegedly passed a $70 check to a local food chain on Feb. 22. Harvey pleaded no contest April 23 and Judge Joseph Clifford imposed a $50 fine on the convicted. The fine will be commuted if Harvey can show a receipt stating that restitution was made before Friday.

Incidents on the police blotter include: the reported purse snatch from a 72 year old woman near Champion Ave. and Oak St. The woman, Mattie F. Hunter, 1075 Brydan Rd., said that the dastardly thief made off with her billfold containing $17, miscellaneous identification and credit cards, all in a cloth shopping bag. She described the suspect as being between 12-15, wearing blue jeans and a dark cap.

THE COLUMBUS FOUNDATION

The Columbus Foundation is a community trust for the receipt and distribution of charitable funds which are given by many individuals, families, and businesses. Income from these funds, and under certain circumstances principal, is used for charitable purposes which benefit citizens of central Ohio. The Foundation's assets are held by four trustee banks and are managed by the trust departments of those banks. Decisions as to charitable distributions are made by a seven-member Governing Committee chosen for their knowledge of the area and its changing needs. The Columbus Foundation was established in 1943 and is typical of some 240 community foundations in the United States.

Candidates Riding Final Miles Of Campaign Trail

With the June 8 primary election just four weeks away, candidates and their respective cohorts started riding the campaign trail at breakneck speed this week.

Donald L. Stewart, educational consultant and member of the Model Cities Neighborhood Assembly, was among the riders saddling up in the stable of front-running Democratic presidential candidate Jimmy Carter.

Stewart will serve as the black community coordinator of the former Georgia governor in the 12th and 15th congressional districts. Karl Struble, regional coordinator for the two districts, announced the appointment of Stewart this week.

Stewart, educational consultant to Love Academy Pre-School at Cleveland and 25th Ave., will be working with the following state of candidates for election as delegates to the National Democratic Convention on the Carter ticket.

City Councilman Jerry Hammond, 12th district, Lynne LaCour, legislative assistant to Councilman Dr. John H. Rosemond, B. Jennell Butler, Assistant Ohio Atty. Gen. John T. Green, International Staff, United Steel Workers of America, 12th district.

Also, William Garmes, area director, AFSCME, and former director of Ohio Bureau of Employment Services, Ohio-at large delegate, Barbara Holland, customer service representative, Columbus and Southern Ohio Electric Co., and member of Franklin County Democrat Executive committee, 12th district, and Donald Day, assistant area director, AFSCME, 15th district.

A whirlwind visit of the Nations First Lady, Mrs. Betty Ford, was the highlight of Republicans campaign activities last week. Mrs. Ford, during her fund-raising mission, dined with the parents of Archie Griffin, Mr. and Mrs. James Griffin. They were introduced by Gov. James A. Rhodes as the "first family of Ohio."

Upon her arrival at Port Columbus, Mrs. Ford was greeted by a group of first and second grade students of Kent Elementary School. Mrs. Ford had invited the students to visit her after receiving an invitation to visit their school.

In the meantime, Mrs. Mary Eskridge, a room mother at Kent Elementary School, has named office manager for the Franklin County Committee of the campaign of Rep. James V. Stanton, Democratic candidate for the U.S. Senate. The office is located at 1298 E. Broad St.

Mrs. Eskridge, 866 Studer Ave., is the community organizer for the Fourth Ward Democratic Committeeman, James Davis. She served as manager of Jerry Hammond's campaign office during his successful race for election to City Council last year.

Stanton's chief opponent for the nomination, former U.S. Senator Howard Metzenbaum, declared that a national health program will be his first priority if elected to the Senate.

Metzenbaum pointed out that 20 million Americans have no health insurance, another 30-million have inadequate health insurance, over 42 million have no hospitalization insurance, and 43.1 million no surgical insurance.

"The American people are tired of the American Medical Association, which should be seeking to promote the best health care for this country, being an obstacle to a progressive national care program," Metzenbaum said, and added:

"I hereby call on the AMA, the American Hospital Association, and other groups to sit down and come up with a positive national health care program."

In the 12th District Congressional race for the Democratic nomination, the two candidates began beating the campaign bushes with vigorous force throughout the district last week. City Councilwoman Fran Ryan and Jack Ruscho, for Assistant Ohio Atty. Gen., appear to be locked in a close race for the nomination, and a chance to battle Samuel DeVine, Republican incumbent for the seat at the Nov. 2 election.

Mrs. Ryan, who has strong followings in black communities, will curtail her campaign activities on Sunday May 23, to be the Women's Day Speaker at Good Samaritan Baptist Church, 1680 E. Fulton St. She will be the principal speaker, chairpersons, Jessie Morris and Mary Sue Tate, announced.

Ruscho, added a new dimension to his campaign strategy last week by announcing in a news release his participation in a civil rights seminar in Atlanta, Ga. According to the release, he would conduct a seminar on civil rights litigation May 6-7. Over 100 trial lawyers would participate in the seminar, he said.

In the same release, he reported that a book he has written on Civil Rights Litigation, has just been released by the publisher, W.H. Anderson Co., of Cincinnati.

Although the former attorney for the Ohio Civil Rights Commission is making his first bid for elective public office, he could conceivably offer a strong challenge to Mrs. Ryan for the black vote with his soft-peddled civil rights pitch.

While Devine has no primary opposition, he is expected to face two foes in the general election, for he will not only have to battle it out with the winner of the Democrat nomination, but a black independent will also be challenging him for his seat.

William (Bill) Moss, former news director of WKVO radio, qualified for the race via the petition route. As an independent, his name will not appear on the June 8 ballot.

Another Congressional contest which has begun to create considerable political dust, involves the 5th district scrap between two Democrats. David Sweet, a member of the Public Utility Commission of Ohio (PUCO), a relatively political newcomer, is matched against Mike McGhee, a two time loser for the nomination. The winner will meet Chalmers P. Wylie, Republican incumbent, who has no primary opposition.

Sweet, endorsed for the nomination by the Franklin County Democrat organization, served as director of the Ohio Dept. of Economic and Community Development under the administration of former Gov. John J. Gilligan.

It was during that time, Sweet points out, the movement to bring the Volkswagen plant to Columbus was initiated. Although Gov. Rhodes effort to bring VW to Brookpark is "understandable," Sweet stated in a news release, however, pleads with Rhodes not to "downplay" the proposed Columbus site, the old White-Westinghouse Plant.

Another race in which campaign activities were heating up this week is the 16th State Senate district in which the Democrat incumbent, Donald Woodland, is being challenged by a formidable opponent.

Michael Schwarzwald, son of the late Municipal Court Judge Alan Schwarzwald, not only has the Michael Stinziano (D-Columbus) which recognizes Mrs. Benton for her commitment and determination in returning to college at Ohio State University after a 45 year absence. The resolution cites her "unequaled perseverance, energy and initiative" to fulfill a life-long ambition to complete her education and obtain a degree. She started college in 1927 at Central State University, but illnesses and finances forced her to drop out. She began classes at OSU in 1973, working toward a degree in social work, and works part-time at a work-study job in the College of Education. A series of hip operations has forced her to use a cane walker, and she carries her books in a two-wheeled caddy on campus. If all goes well, she says, she'll graduate in 1978.

name of his popular dad going for him, he is held in the highest regard by the young voting populace, both white and black.

Two other legislative faces which were stirring up above average excitement consists of the 29th and 31st House districts. Although Rep. William Kopp, Democrat incumbent has endorsements of the party and of labor leaders, he is obviously running scared.

The man Kopp regards as his major adversary is Les Brown, former popular personality of WKVO radio. Brown, one of the most aggressive civil-rights advocates of the city, his short on campaign funds, but because of dynamic personality and strong identification with blacks at virtually every age level, he is expected to give Kopp a close race for the nomination.

Swim-O-Rama For Diabetes This Weekend At 5 Sites

The Central Ohio Diabetes Association Youth Program will hold a Swim-O-Rama at five Franklin County locations this weekend, one on Saturday, and four on Sunday.

The Swim-O-Rama will be held on the Westside May 15 at the Hilltop YMCA, 2679 Valleyview Dr., from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m.

The May 16 Swim-O-Rama will be held from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. at:

NORTH: Viking Spa and Sports Club, 888 E. Dublin-Granville Rd.

FAR EAST: Sub-Aquatics Swim Club, 8855 E. Broad St., Reynoldsburg.

NORTHWEST: Upper Arlington High School Natatorium, 1650 Ridgeview Rd.

EAST: The Jewish Center, 1125 College Ave.

The Swim-O-Rama proceeds go to the Association's youth program, which will help send diabetic children to summer camp for recreation and education on diabetes. The Association now sends 60 children to the week-long camp sessions. They want to double that number in 1978.

"We hope to raise $20,000," Lou Saslaw, youth director, said.

He said that the funds would also help to support public and professional education programs on diabetes, weekend seminars for teens and young children and other continuing programs for juvenile diabetics.

Participants will recruit friends and relatives to make a pledge to the Diabetes Association for each lap they swim.

"We're hoping to have 200 swimmers at each pool," Saslaw said. "That would be 1000, and if each participant got 10 sponsors to pledge 20 cents a lap and swam 10 laps, we'd have $20,000."

TRACY SCOTT, 1100 E. 38th Ave., is telling everyone about the Central Ohio Diabetes Association's Swim-O-Rama on the Hilltop Saturday, May 15, and at four other locations Sunday, May 16.

What's Happening To Pres. Ford

It is a strange phenomenon to see an incumbent United States president struggling as the underdog for nominating convention delegates.

The loss of the Texas primary was a mild shock. But, when Indiana, a border state of Michigan, turned the president down for Reagan, then it's time to sit up and take notice.

The loss of southern states cannot cause too much of a worry since Gov. George Wallace and Ronald Reagan are both fishing in the same stream. In fact, at the beginning of the race for delegates, it was hinted in some quarters that a Reagan-Wallace ticket was in the making.

However, when a Republican President must struggle for votes in northern-midwestern states for delegates, there are indications that there is something seriously wrong. There should be enough Republican patronage in these states to insure President Ford the state's delegates.

Is Watergate and the pardoning of Richard Nixon the albatross hanging around Mr. Ford's neck? And/or is it Henry Kissinger?

One thing for sure, there can be no joy in the White House now as the Reagan delegate count surpasses that of Mr. Ford. While the die may be cast for the few remaining primaries, Mr. Ford had better take a closer look at some of the people surrounding him. His southern strategy nor his Black strategy seems to be working.

Note To Cleve Black Democrats

Democrats in New Haven, Connecticut, March 11, elected William Jones, 41, as their party's town chairman.

Jones is the first Black to hold such a politically powerful position in any major Connecticut city, defeated former party chairman Arthur V. Barbieri. Barbieri, who often referred to himself as the "party boss," had held the party chairmanship for 22 years.

It is inevitable that the Cuyahoga

County Democratic organization will have to make changes in its present troika leadership set up, there is no reason at all as to why a Black Democrat should not be elected to fill the chairmanship post. Roberson County, North Carolina a few weeks ago elected a Negro chairman.

What are Black Democrats waiting for in Ohio?

MORE THAN 150 MILLION WILL BE OLD ENOUGH TO VOTE IN NOVEMBER - The Census Bureau estimates that more than 150 million Americans will be eligible to vote in the November 2 presidential election. This represents an increase of nearly 10 million over the voting age population at the time of the 1972 presidential election. The preliminary report shows the south, defined as 16 states and the District of Columbia, contains a greater number of potential electors than any other region.

Ohio has shown a significant increase in the number of those eligible to vote since the last presidential election. Ohio has nearly 7.5 million citizens over the age of 18 who will be eligible to vote. This figure shows an increase of nearly 400,000 from four years ago. The registration deadline of Monday, May 10, is fast approaching. Remember to "Get the Spirit of '76, Register and Vote." The vote is the most basic American right and our foremost civic duty. Will you do your part?

The Truth Hurts Sometime

There are times in the lives of all journalists when telling the truth hurts. Contrary to popular belief, most of us do not find pleasure in publishing information which is potentially embarrassing or damaging to the careers and reputations of others. When we have to do so, we are not usually happy about it, but we do what we must, according to the ethical standards of our profession.

Last week, the front page of our Columbus edition contained three stories which, in one way or another, were embarrassing to either the school system, to certain schools, or to individual teachers.

One of the items in question revealed that a young woman high school coach had been arrested - not tried, and not convicted, but arrested-for soliciting for prostitution. A second item concerned a controversy over an elementary teacher's unorthodox disciplinary action (tying two pupils together with a rope around their necks). The third was a report of the dismissal of criminal assault charges against a high school teacher who had been accused of breaking a student's nose.

Each of these stories began with a "tip," an unsolicited telephone call from a reader who felt that the facts should be publicly known. As we do with all such leads, we investigated, examining public records, interviewing eyewitnesses and participants, cross-checking with reliable informed sources. We then published the known and verifiable facts. When hearsay seemed relevant, we published it also, taking care to clearly identify such information as the subjective opinions of specified individuals.

In none of these cases did we take a judgmental stance as to the guilt or innocence of any of the principal figures. We were not "jumping" on the school system. A thorough reading of our newspaper will show that we present complete and balanced coverage of the public school system, and that coverage-of the system as a whole, and of events and programs occurring in individual schools-is, by and large, positive.

So, to our many friends in the educational community, be assured that we are not "out to get you." And to the readership at large, you may be similarly assured that we will endeavor under all circumstances to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth.

Even when it hurts.

A Minority In Disfavor

It was interesting to hear the complaints of leaders of the anti-busing demonstration in Washington a few days ago that nobody seems to be paying them any attention. Being rebuffed at Congressional offices and government officials buildings, was something these racist hadn't expected.

There is no question but that racism in America is being exploited by a few hard core klanmen and others of their ilk. However, their potential for trouble is greater than their numbers.

Busing and other racial issues cannot be ignored or left to happenstance by the good, well intentioned people who comprise the majority of our population.

The sooner the racist find out that they have an unpopular cause, the better. It's time that all Americans speak out.

Cast Two Votes For Black Power

By THOMAS S. WATSON, JR., CPA

We have an opportunity to make some changes in our favor this fall. Our Black politicians have often sold out as a matter of self preservation. They could not find Black money to finance re-election campaign so they had to accept the white.

We can take that noose from around their necks by using federal tax dollars to finance the campaigns of the Black politicians that deserve our support.

The tax laws have been changed so that each person can donate $50 of their tax money to political campaigns or organizations. It is in effect a direct federal subsidy of $50 to the candidate or political organization of our choice. (A husband and wife can use $100 of tax money to support candidates or political organizations of their choice).

To make this system work we must all be interested in making things better for ourselves. Our collective $50 subsidies will have a resounding impact on the 1978 elections.

Here's How it Works: You write a check or money order to the campaign or political organization that you want to support. It could be 10 checks of $5 each to one campaign or any other number for any amount up to $50.

When it is time to prepare your tax return you indicate that you gave $50 to a campaign or political organization. Your subsidy will be subtracted from the tax you must pay to IRS. If you have a refund coming it will be added to your refund.

For example: You had your taxes done and it worked out that you are to get a $100 refund. But you gave $50 to political organizations during the year. Your refund would then be $150.

Ordinary refund $100; Political subsidy $50. Total Refund $150.

This is an opportunity to be heard by our Black politicians. Let's tell them what we want and need then back them with our vote and U.S. tax dollars.

They will then have to answer to only us for their actions.

DOWN THE BIG ROAD

BY WILLIAM O. WALKER

Recognizing The Change

In writing about the change by the news media, electronic and print in covering activities of Negroes, Roger Wilkins, a Black reporter on the New York Times, says: "The melodrama of riots, burnings and demonstrations are gone, giving way to the sensationalism of Watergate, Vietnam, the Women's Movement, FBI and CIA revelations."

Commenting further, Mr. Wilkins pointed out that "where the upheaval of the '60s died down, America made a political decision to retreat to a world where Blacks were not visible. The decision was simply to turn its back - at least for now - on the tougher aspects of the subject of race."

Mr. Wilkins then ask this question: "But what about the changes in Blacks themselves that they have allowed the lights to go out?"

That there are changes taking place in the Black sector, is evident to all who concern themselves with the subject.

One of the most flagrant declines in interest, is in the number of Negro voters. Our voting numbers are decreasing at a time when the Black vote has its greatest potential.

Dr. Armando Gutierrez, a professor at the University of Texas at Austin, in observing the changes taking place, observed that: "The Black movement of the '60s was designated a civil rights movement, but its ultimate goal was more than just 'civil' rights, those rights guaranteed by the state."

"Blacks," says Prof. Gutierrez, "today are concerned with more substantive human rights, such as being able to have a good job and provide for their families."

Dr. Gutierrez points out that Blacks and Chicanos in the United States exist as colonies. They are brought into the system and given jobs and so on, whenever the economy is in relatively good shape. Advances were made in the '60s, but now, because of a faltering economy, the first ones to get pushed back out are the minorities.

"Race," says Wilkins, "is one of America's crucial issues." To which I agree, in light of this then, how do we explain the declining interest by our people in the crucial areas of jobs, education and politics. At a time when we should be redoubling our efforts, we are apparently slowing down. Could it be that the 90% of us who are making it, are writing off the 10% on relief and those involved with crime?

Dr. William Moore, Jr., of Ohio State University, in his research findings on Black educators in white colleges, says that, although more than 10% of the general population, Blacks make up only 3.5% of the faculties of the two-year colleges.

While all educational institutions are supposed to be equal opportunity employers, there are no outliers at this apparent discrimination against Black teachers.

Gov. Philip Noel (D-R) who heads the Democratic platform committee, made some very slurring remarks about Negroes a few days ago. When the matter was reported in the press, Democratic Party chairman Robert Strauss said: "this is the kind of man the Democrats need to give America some straight talk."

Such remarks should have drawn a volley of protest from Black Democrats, but, they didn't. A few years ago, there would have been a torrent of protest. Could it be that our Black Democratic leaders have grown fat and lazy over the spoils of office?

It will be tragic if, after all the momentum we gained in the '60s we are to lose it because of inertia. Are we paying the price of loss of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.'s leadership? I recognize that the void he left has not as yet been filled. Maybe it won't be until a new crisis arises.

We certainly can't afford to lose any of the precious gains we made in the past. The lethargic situation we now face, is serious. We just can't afford to slip back one inch. However, if we don't heed the lighthouse warnings, we may soon find ourselves nearing dangerous shoals.

Our flowery bed of ease has not as yet arrived. If there are those who think they see such a period of ease, I must warn them that it is only a mirage.

Adjusting to change may be difficult, but adjust we must.

WORLD ON VIEW

The Opportunity Is For Real

Every since this country turned from compulsory military training (the draft) to voluntary participation in its armed forces, there has been increased rivalry between the various branches of service for the top-quality recruit.

Further, each of the services has had to meet the challenge of bringing its minority personnel up to a figure that reflects, as closely as possible, the proportion of minorities in the general population.

One of the most zealous of the services in seeking to improve its representation of minorities, has been the U.S. Navy, which has used the theme "The opportunity is for real...and so are we" in recruiting efforts in minority communities.

Cleveland, last week, was given an opportunity to see and hear an outstanding exhibit of minority advancement, in the person of Rear Admiral Samuel Lee Gravely Jr. the Navy's first black admiral. Admiral Gravely, commandant of the 11th Naval District, San Diego, California, was on an eight-day recruitment trip. In Cleveland, he spoke to pupils in several high schools, and explained the Navy's commitment to increasing opportunities for minorities to a select group of black opinion makers at a luncheon in his honor last Monday.

Admiral Gravely traced the status of Negroes in the Navy back to World War II. When there were only 60 black officers, and the major black Navy personnel were confined to the steward's branch (messmen). Today blacks are serving in all branches of the Navy, and some 400 of the 4200 students at the U.S. Naval Academy in Annapolis, Maryland, are black.

Still, the Admiral had to concede that the Navy was reaching only about 50 percent of the recruiting goals it had set for minority recruits. For years we have been hearing some industrialists saying that they have been unable to hire more blacks because they cannot find enough qualified applicants. Generally we have listened with skepticism, since in many instances this has been a simple excuse for non-action on equal opportunity. Nevertheless, this is exactly the dilemma facing Navy recruiters in their efforts to improve black representation.

To date, blacks comprise only 8.3% of Navy personnel and only 1.5% of Navy officers. The Navy would like to raise these figures to 12% of equal the black population in the country.

Cleveland recruiters have found it difficult to attract blacks who are scholastically able to meet the higher Navy standards. No longer are the military services a haven for the ignorant and low achiever. In peacetime, the services can afford to seek a higher calibre recruit, and offer him a wider variety of career opportunities.

It offers men like Admiral Gravely as living proof that in the Navy, those who have what it takes, can go a long way. The Navy offers the new recruit 70 career fields where the opportunities to learn a real skill are for real. But applicants are going to have to come bearing good scholastic records to be accepted.

The inducements were never better. Youngsters coming right out of high school, can be guaranteed income while learning a skill, get an opportunity to travel, see the world, and perhaps become an Admiral.

It's worth looking into.

Aggrey Cool In Hot Seat

The Ohio Department of Public Welfare is confronted with such a mass of complex and frustrating problems that it's difficult to decide whether offering a sincere congratulation or a heartfelt condolence to the newly appointed director are in order.

These disturbing thoughts came to mind right after Gov. James A. Rhodes announced the appointment of Kwagyr Aggrey as director of the problem plagued department last week. Aggrey, the first black to be so honored, steps into the shoes of Raymond McKenna who was virtually and summarily canned by a partisan vote of the Ohio Senate. The 21 Democrats voted to reject McKenna's nomination, while the 12 Republicans vote to approve.

Aggrey, whose credentials for performing the arduous task are outstanding, must also face this same hostile senate for confirmation, or rejection. In discussing this matter with him, one gets the impression that he is approaching it with cautious optimism.

In the meantime, Aggrey, district manager of the Dept. of Welfare in Cleveland since 1963, is not letting any grass grow under his feet while getting acquainted with the responsibility of his position. On his second day in office he announced that 33 Ohioans were convicted for food stamp fraud in the first three months of 1978.

Although he did not participate in a hearing of the Legislature's Medicaid Committee meeting last Thursday, his name was brought up by Senator Harry Meshel (D-Youngstown), who led the opposition to McKenna's confirmation. He extended his sympathy to Aggrey for sitting in one of the real hot seats in state government.

Meshel, chairman of the committee, made his remark during a discussion of ways of heading off the cut-offs of Medicaid funds for a variety of health services. He wants Gov. Rhodes to postpone the announced May 15 cut-off payments to June 30, the end of the budget year.

Later, obviously cool in hot seat, Aggrey suggested that he would be in a position by next week's meeting to recommend ways to temporarily resolve the critical situation.

While Meshel's extension of sympathy to Aggrey may have been sincere, it may also have been his way saying that Aggrey can expect no mercy when he comes before a senate committee for confirmation. Therein the question of congratulation or condolence comes to the surface.

Food Stamps Fate On The Line

The fate of one of the most important federal programs - and one of the most often attacked - will be decided soon.

The Senate has passed a measure revising the food stamp program and the House is considering a version of its own. No one knows what the final changes in the program will be, but the struggle to preserve the food stamp program as an essential weapon in the arsenal against hunger an uphill fight.

Congressional reconsideration of the program comes after many months of abuse hurled on the program, ranging from outright misstatements of facts to name-calling by people who should know better. Secretary of the Treasury William Simon, for example, made a big splash a while ago with his now-famous statement that food stamp recipients are "chiselers."

A good part of the hostility toward the program is due to the simple fact that it's effective. Some 19 million people receive stamps, making it one of the really successful federal programs that relieves some of the burdens of poverty.

Big as the program is, it still reaches less people than it should; a recent Congressional study found that up to a fourth of the population could become eligible for food stamps at some time during the year.

So long as the program was relatively small and ineffective it was tolerated but as soon as it began to accomplish its aims of supplementing the incomes of low-income families it became a target for the budget-cutters.

There is in our society a reluctance to subsidize people who are poor and in need of assistance that's balanced by an enthusiasm for subsidizing the better-off and politically-powerful blocs. The food stamp program for example, started out as a subsidy for farmers, helping to distribute surplus crops.

With the big rise in food prices in recent years, the program has become transformed into one that helps low-income families afford to buy food for the dinner table. And that's when the howls about chiselers and the high cost of the program started.

The number of recipients started to mushroom when the economy went into its down-spin and people were thrown out of work. The high cost of the program is part of the high cost of keeping our economy on a high unemployment basis, and it will decline when people get back to work at decent wages. Every time unemployment rates go up just one percent, another 750,000 people get the stamps.

Recipients are all poor or near-poor. Nearly half are on welfare, a fifth are "working poor," a tenth are elderly people who qualify for supplemental social security aid. Nine out of ten households in the program earned less than $6,000 last year.

So there's not much room for chiseling there, regardless of the ill-tempered remarks of the programs' wealthy critics. Such cheating as occurs comes from that part of the program its critics most want to keep untouched - the purchase provision.

Instead of giving stamps to qualified families, the government distributes them through 6,700 vendors who sell the stamps to eligible participants for cash. One report suggests that millions have been embezzled by some of the vendors, so cheating in the food stamp program is largely a matter of white collar crime, not recipient fraud.

The purchase requirement also costs about $100 million to administer, so the cost-cutters could do themselves a favor by doing away with an element of the program that seriously impedes its effectiveness, since it makes poor families come up with big up-front payments. And this requirement means that many who are eligible, just can't afford to buy the stamps.

The faults of the food stamp program are largely restricted to those regulations that discourage its use, make eligibility a matter of bureaucratic whim and impose burdens on the needy. Any changes in the program should be those that make it work better.

Busing Advocates Missing

The trial trudges on, the trial that purports to persuade the U.S. District Court to order the Columbus Board of Education to mix up school children complex wise by busing some of them to other schools predominantly one color or the other. Such mixing children has no record of fruitfulness.

Columbus has had mixed schools for years yet the results have been black children coming away from the mixed classes and doing their thing the remainder of the day just as black people always do their thing. The action does not necessarily result in better educated colored children and certainly there is little of any planting of seeds of racial tolerance.

The generation of whites who now fight busing and the mixing of school children racially went to Columbus secondary schools with colored children, mixed with them daily at school and on the athletic field or floor, yet in spite of all that mixing, racial strife continues and efforts for mixing school pupils by busing finds those experienced whites in the opposition.

As said above, the trial lingers on. The most appalling development is the obvious scarcity of black visitors. This writer has attended the trial sporadically but, at each visit, it was noticeable that in a court room of about 25 people, all were white except two colored attorneys and two to three visitors.

The trial is about black people and methods to get their children an ostensible improved education. In spite of this, the many outspoken critics of the school system do not even go to the trial to give the champions and defenders of the cause moral support.

There was anticipation of many colored attending and the anticipation was for a large crowd of black people on the outside. Steps were taken to handle the crowd and to be ready for any demonstration, trial eruption and the like. A sign met the eye upon the street door entrance pointing the way to the trial on school busing. There was a desk at which sat a United States Marshal handing out a numbered slip of paper.

The prospective visitor took an elevator to the third floor where he was met by another man at a desk, who took up the slip of paper, and a policeman, who went over his body area with a device to detect any firearms or the like. If the person was clean he was directed to where court was being held and went there, and, entering the court room expecting to have to find it filled, was met with virtually empty spectators benches.

The black enthusiasts for busing in Columbus certainly have thinned out for the major action of accomplishment. Why?

Too often the black man shows himself to be a sham. When it comes to his putting his shoulders to wheel to help out, he is too often behind front line spectators sneaking a peak at it all. He is the one who has been ranting to get his children away from all black schools into white schools. The NAACP brings a case before the Federal Court to determine if there should be busing to get his children to all white schools but, the shouting and tumult subdues and the black man goes home to supper forgetting all about the other work that has to be done.

I have not advocated busing for I believe it accomplishes nothing. I have recorded the advocates of mixed schools, their version of results, but am amazed that disinterest in the final phase of the move for busing is so neglected by the prominent advocates. Why?

Where is that host of faces that show up in mass protests and public scenes of supporters of causes for the black man and like to get mention in papers, during the current trial? They are not following through in the instances of the trial for busing. Public speakers will call the black man a great people and they like to hear it but they are also a big bunch of backsliders.

It is not predictable at this writing which way the court will decide the case. The court will have to pour through mountains of testimony, records and other documents but, one thing will obviate itself, the lack of interests of those who purport to benefit. As was said before, the black man is loud on the front end of action but fades out from the thick of the action.

There ain't nothing much the matter with youngsters today that a five minute session in the woodshed with their parents couldn't cure, only the woodshed is the garage and the parents are out driving the car. They may be looking for Shorty, who is on vacation, but who left behind this hot number 696.

BOARD MEMBERS - Social gaiety preceded the order of business slated for the 32nd Annual Kickoff Luncheon for the United Negro College Fund 1976 campaign drive, apparently evident from smiling UNCF Advisory Board members. Checking the agenda before heading into the banquet hall of the Columbus Hilton Hotel are Dr. Harold L. Enerson, president of Ohio State University; Dr. Margaret Roberts, UNCF Social and Service club chairperson, and Robert Lazarus Jr., UNCF Board of Directors chairman. The trio were among the several hundred in attendance last Friday afternoon for the UNCF commencement drive for $175,000 from the central Ohio area.

DeBloom was the 1975 general chairman of the United Negro College Fund (UNCF) Central Ohio Campaign and 1976 Communications vice chairman. The presentation was followed by a UNCF kickoff luncheon for the Area's campaign drive. A regional goal of $175,000 was emphasized, with a goal of $13 million set for the entire state. The luncheon was held last Friday afternoon at the Columbus Hilton Hotel.

The program is one of the most positive on-going programs in Columbus today in its aid to the education of ethnic groups. He added, "But in our racist society, we always place a stigma on positive programs that help the poor and disenfranchised persons."

"Miss Bessie Jackson is a most dedicated woman who understands human needs and who has always over-extended herself to meet those human needs." Fraley urged Ellis' support be given to the program to insure its future.

"Shepard is a family branch which seeks to serve and meet the needs of each member of the family," says branch head Ruby Kyles. Public support for the branch was illustrated in the March circulation statistics, where figures for Shepard showed the largest monthly circulation increase throughout the entire public library system. The March circulation at Shepard increased 105.88 per cent over March, 1975.

Shepard offers a variety of services: 8mm films and projector; audio cassette tapes; cassette tape players; an adult book discussion group; the Cool Readers Club for elementary school children; magazines; a children's film hour; a story hour; and Project ABLE cultural programs. Summer reading club begins June 7. For adults, the branch offers best sellers, civil service test books, and reference assistance. For children, the branch has paperbacks and study aids. According to Ms. Kyles, "If the branch doesn't have what you want, we'll try to get it for you."

Public Library officials announced Friday they will postpone a decision regarding the renewal of the lease on the Shepard Branch Library which is located at 2185 E. Fifth Ave. The lease expires at the end of June, 1976, and advance notification is required.

Library Dr. Don Sager indicated that the major reason for the postponement was to await the outcome of the June 8 election on the library's 6/10 mill levy. Although the library is confident the public will support the issue, Sager stated that sound business practice requires the library to postpone renewal of any leases hearing expiration until it is certain sufficient funds will be available to maintain the library. If the levy is not successful, the library will have to reduce its expenses, and Sager said this would require some branch library closings.

Officials stated that usage has increased substantially during the past year at the branch, and they would be reluctant to see the branch closed.

To avoid closing branches in the past, Sager reported the library had reduced total library system staff by 16 per cent and the book budget by 50 per cent. The only remaining step is to reduce the number of branches he said.

The library board has gone on record to keep the branch open if the levy is successful in June.

Black Colleges Study 'Excellent'

By LESBY HEAD
(ON CAMPUS/OSU)

In his award-winning dissertation Leonard Haynes found that the chief executives of public black colleges insist their institutions will survive "despite the connotation of doomism that the demands of desegregation carry."

Dr. Haynes, as assistant to the provost, was one of five top finalists in the American Professors of Higher Education Dissertation of the Year Award for 1975. His dissertation, "An Analysis of the Effects of Desegregation Upon Public Black Colleges," was completed in June 1975.

"Black institutions have always supported the principle of desegregation," Dr. Haynes said. "In fact, they have historically led the way in affirmative action."

Dr. Haynes said he became interested in the effects of the Adams vs. Richardson desegregation decision of 1972 before enrolling in the higher educational administration program.

"When the word desegregation is said, most people think in terms of putting blacks into white institutions, and not vice versa," he said. "So very little data had been gathered on how the presidents of these institutions even felt about the ruling."

Sixty-four percent of the presidents and vice presidents of the nation's 34 public black colleges responded to Dr. Haynes' questionnaires.

Some of the findings of the study are that the federal government had the most effect in getting these institutions to desegregate; prior to 1972, on-campus organizations had more effect on the desegregation policy-making process than off-campus interest groups; and one of the major effects of desegregation has been an increase in the sharing of information on desegregation among the chief executives of public black colleges.

Another finding of his survey is that the resolution of affirmative action problems has been as important to public black colleges as resolving the issue of desegregation itself.

Dr. Haynes feels that black colleges, both public and private, are a viable force in higher education. He notes that 60 to 70 percent of all blacks holding undergraduate degrees have received them from black institutions.

"I am the product of a public black college, and I appreciate the commitment I received from that institution," he said. Dr. Haynes received his B.A. in history from Southern University in Louisiana. He received his M.A. in American history from Carnegie Mellon.

He has presented data from his dissertation to a number of higher education conferences and said he has received positive reactions.

It seems to me that it's about time for Black people to start putting on the brakes.

To sit down. Settle back. And take a good, hard look at where we've been. And where we're going.

In the 60's, we all talked a good deal about the importance of Black history and Black culture. It is important to know about our heritage. Our self-image. And our sense of accomplishment. Important, because we aren't looking for patronizing approval from white America, to our demands for equality of opportunity and justice.

Why should we? We've been an important contributor to the growth of America, through cultural, scientific, industrial, and patriotic efforts.

So we marched. We shouted. We boycotted. We sang. We've had riots. And we've made some strong, meaningful socio-economic gains.

Our family median income has doubled. More of our young people are attending colleges. And more of us own our own homes.

But, is that all there is? Shouldn't nearly two decades of social revolution lead to something more? Something called social responsibility.

It seems to me that some of our gains are drawing dividing lines, in the Black community. And I'm not talking about haves and have-nots.

I'm addressing this to the middle and upper class Blacks who are stepping on the fingers of their Brothers, who are simply trying to climb the same ladder.

Greed and envy are bad companions. And they're beginning to make Black America a leaderless, self-destructive community. What's happened to respect? And unity?

Where are the heroes we need for our young people to follow? The helping hands?

If the better educated, higher income-earning Blacks are too busy looking to their own selfish interests, and not taking time to give a boost to a Brother who wants to come up—then we're all in big trouble.

Maybe it's time for some of us to look back a little. And get back in touch a lot.

State Agency Initiates Program To Aid Ohio Minority Businesses

A pilot program to utilize state services and private industry to develop and aid minority businesses in Ohio, was recently presented to the National Minority Purchasing Council's (NMPC) annual conference, James A. Duerk, state development director stated in a report to Gov. James A. Rhodes.

Because of the Ohio Department of Economic and Community Development's efforts to increase minority business opportunities the department was invited to the conference to describe expanded operations of its Office of Minority Business Enterprise made public earlier.

Attending the Colorado Springs conference were regional purchasing council presidents and regional directors of OMBE and Business Resource Centers from all parts of the U.S. Ohio's DECD was the only state development agency to be invited.

The proposed program, as outlined by the Ohio development department in conjunction with James Roseboro, corporate civic affairs director of Borden, Inc. and assistant NMPC public relations committee chairman, consists of:

- Securing a minority advertising consultant to oversee an advertising campaign aimed at Ohio minority media. It will be designed to promote minority businesses as well as the services of OMBE and other organizations aiding minority businesses. This will include public service announcements on general audience radio and television stations.

- Securing a consultant to work with local organizations to catalogue Ohio minority firms and their capabilities for NMPC computer records to provide corporations outside the state with immediate access to these firms. Directories categorized by product, service and location will be available to state and private organizations.

- Securing a consultant to inventory goods and services purchased by the top 1000 Ohio firms.

- Matching minority capabilities to majority firm needs and making the information available to groups working with minority companies.

- Providing public relations and graphics technical assistance to local groups participating in trade shows and expositions.

- Purchasing video-tape equipment to lend to companies who wish to sponsor the Xerox Company's 13-week NMPC

- sales training program, "Because of Who You Are."

Duerk said the program "combines minority business development with overall development activities of DECD with the result being a closer working relationship among all sectors of Ohio's economy."

TOP THREE - Veronica Turner, "Miss Franklin" 1976, poses with Brenda Newsome, left, first runner-up and Jeannie Cunningham, second runner-up in the Franklin Junior High Pageant competition.

Wild Game Smorgasbord Pleases Ohio Sportsmen Choice Guests

The cost of meat at the supermarkets is ridiculous, unbelievable and regrettable, but this bit of economic bad news has not cramped the lifestyle of members of the Ohio Sportsmen's Club to any discernible degree. Members of the Sportsmen's Club treated their friends to a Wild Game Smorgasbord at the John Scales Building and the only item that they purchased from their friendly butcher was a ham for the tenderhearted.

In many ways, the format for the Sportsmen's cocktail-dinner dance resembled many other similar type invitational parties. The gala evening began with cocktails and wild game hors d'oeuvres. A smorgasbord menu served later in the evening included gourmet prepared chafing dishes of delectable venison, antelope, raccoon, ground hog, pheasant salad, rabbit, elk, muskrat, ham, garden greens, peas with mushrooms, scalloped potatoes, relishes, and you name it.

Members of the Ohio Sportsmen's Club had a

Walter Pickett, a member of the Indiana club. Traditionally, "The Stick" is presented to the hunter who makes the biggest goof during the hunting season. Mr. Pickett won this dubious award for failing to follow all of the necessary steps to prevent a choice piece of wild game from spoiling after the kill.

Dr. Robert Manuel was honored by the Indiana sportsmen. The group presented Dr. Manuel with one of the handsome hunting jackets that symbolizes membership in the 20th Century Sportsmen's Club, because he was

Other guests from the Hoosier state who were royally entertained by the Ohio Sportsmen were Messrs. and Mesdames Paul Early, Wayne Barksdale, John Crunkleton, Amos VanPelt, Cahoon Murphy Sr., Art Wilson, E. Morris, John Nauphy, Zertha Hughes, Charles Wallace, and Ed Bennett.

Other out of town guests were Messrs. and Mesdames Kenneth Holiday, Cleveland; Herbert Hoosie, Chillicothe; James Jones, Marion; Wayne Buster, Wilmington; Also Charles Graham, Wilmington; Beverly Dowell, Xenia; and Carol Cobb, Springfield.

The hunting jacket is decorated on all parts with emblems that indicate which animal Dr. Manuel has outwitted during his hunting career. The two crossed rifles on the sleeves of the jacket indicates membership in the National Rifle Association, according to Cahoon Murphy, vice president of the Ft. Wayne Club.

Members of the a group of boys called "Friends" went on a chartered bus tour of the Nation's Capital and New York City, thanks to their own initiative and the financial generosity of civic minded groups in the community. It was an unforgettable jaunt for the 80 young travelers and their chaperones, Clifford Tyree, Robert Taylor, Alphonso Simmons, Dean Francis, Van Haynes and Delayne McCampbell.

In mid April two chartered buses with 80 delighted and anxious young boys departed Columbus for points east and a series of cultural experiences that will warm their hearts for a lifetime.

Their first stop was the Howard University Campus in Washington, D.C., where they had breakfast and enjoyed a VIP tour of the campus and viewed informative slides of campus activities. Their stay in Washington, D.C., included a visit to the Museum of African Art, which is located in the former home of Frederick Douglass, and many other historical sites.

The highlight of their Washington stay was a trip to the White House and a special meeting with President Gerald Ford in the east garden. The President's staff arranged for the young tourists to have a special tour of the White House living quarters and they delighted them with souvenir pencils and stationery bearing the official presidential seal. The group left Washington elated.

The next stop was New York City and it was beyond anything any of the youngsters had imagined. Their rounds of the city included a walking tour of Chinatown, a trip to Lincoln Center, a tour of the United Nations Building, a fun trip to Central Park and, of course, a trip to Harlem, which surprised and confounded them.

They did many touristy things in New York but the climax and highlight was a visit to the newly done over Yankee Stadium as guests of a generous member of the Columbus community who owns stock in the Yankee ball team.

The trip east for "Friends" was a rewarding and culturally enriching experience for the 80 young men. For many of them it was their first trip out of the state, their first time to spend a night in a hotel and the first time that they were able to personally verify with their very own eyes that many of the places that they had read about and been told about really existed.

It was a fabulous experience that members of "Friends" are not likely to forget for a long, long time, if ever.

Community Development Funds Aid Urbancrest

Under the 1974 Housing & Community Development Act, a $720,000 block grant was awarded by the U. S. Department of Housing & Urban Development (HUD) to the Franklin County Commissioners - Harold M. Cooper, Michael J. Dorrian and Robert T. Southwick. The Commissioners contracted with Mid-Ohio Regional Planning Commission (MORPC) to administer the urban county grant.

Of the total amount, approximately $95,000 was allocated for a Community Improvement Program (C.I.P.) Nine County villages - Brice, Darbydale, Harrisburg, Lockbourne, New Albany, New Rome, Obetz, Valleyview and Urbancrest - are participating in the program.

Commissioner Dorrian explains the decision was made to combine the nine villages in a comprehensive community improvement program since their individual shares under the community development block grant would have been too small to be of significant value.

Urbancrest was the first of nine Franklin County villages to get help through the Community Improvement Program (CIP). Funded under the 1974 Housing and Community Development Act, the CIP helped Urbancrest residents in two ways: (1) home improvement; (2) tool lending.

The "home improvement" segment provided semi-skilled labor and materials on a priority basis to low-income, elderly and handicapped people. Materials were purchased with community development funds allocated by HUD. Labor was paid for through a separate grant under the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA). Work completed in homes included repairs to correct emergency problems or to make the dwelling units more "livable." No room additions or luxury work were done - e.g., carpet or aluminum siding installation. The program improved the living environment of the tenants; it did NOT provide a new or completely renovated home.

The second phase of the CIP was a "self-help" one. Any village resident could borrow a basic tool - hammer, wrench, saw, painting implements - from a mobile tool van. The van, dump truck and tools were specifically purchased for the program.

A Supervisory Liaison was employed as the CETA Coordinator to oversee the work done in Urbancrest. A field supervisor and crew were hired by the Commissioners through the County's CETA office. With the program in full gear, two six-man crews were hired. Each has a carpenter, electrician, plumber, painters and laborers.

Mid-Ohio personnel and the CETA coordinator met with local officials who appointed a "local action team" comprised of citizens and officials. Handbills explaining the program were distributed door-to-door. Each person interested in the home improvement phase of the CIP was asked to fill out a simple one and one-half page form. The local action team then determined the eligibility of the applicant. In special cases where eligibility was in question, MORPC staff and/or the Commissioners assisted in the final determination. Once applicants were selected, the dwellings were inspected to estimate needed repairs, necessary materials and time involved. Once the crews were in the village, work began on the homes of those qualifying in the order established by the local action team. Anyone in the community, regardless of income, could borrow a tool from the mobile van. Completion of a one-page form was the only

AFTERWARD - The above house, located at 3591 First Ave., Urbancrest, was one of the first to receive a thorough exterior overhaul under the Franklin County Community Improvement Program. The program operates under the 1974 Housing and Community Development Act with a $720,000 block grant approved by the U.S. Dept. of Housing and Urban Development (HUD). The County Commissioners contracted with Mid-Ohio Regional Planning Commission (MORPC) to administer the urban county grant.

MORTGAGE BURNING—Gary Simpson did the honor of holding receptacle during the burning of the mortgage on the Baptist Headquarters building at 48 Parkwood Ave., recently in Columbus. Vice President H.

Ohio Baptist Leaders Hail Mortgage Burning

By A. WILSON WOOD

The Ohio Baptist General Convention recently burned the mortgage on the Baptist Headquarters building located at 48 Parkwood Ave., Columbus.

Following the Wednesday session of the Simultaneous Revival Day meeting at Union Grove Baptist on April 7, President George W. Lucas, newly elected president of the General Convention and pastor of the Bethel Baptist Church in Dayton, along with other dignitaries of the convention and laymen from across the state, combined their efforts in a beautifully conducted mortgage burning ceremony, as a public acknowledgment of the erasing of the indebtedness.

Member churches and pastors under the leadership of President Lucas, and in response to a plea made for the president's emergency plan to liquidate the mortgage, contributed more than $6,000 as a token of their faith and goodwill in the "Go Forward" plan presented.

Actually taking part in the ceremony in the "Go Forward" plan presented. Actually taking part in the ceremony at Union Grove were President Lucas, President Lucile Pauley of the Women's Auxiliary, Vice president H.

Beecher Hicks, Secretary K.C. Marsenburgh, Treasurer R.N. Simpson and son, Gary, and Executive Secretary, P.T.A. Wilson Wood.

Following the ceremony, more than 100 shared in Fellowship Hour made possible by the Convention with Mrs. Betty Spencer, office secretary and other local women in charge. A browsing of the building was made by many of those in attendance as well as meetings held by several of the state bodies.

A large chart, indicating names of persons who made contributions, was placed in the foyer for public viewing. Pictures were taken during the mortgage burning ceremony and also during the Fellowship hour. Anyone desiring a picture of this historic event may make arrangements through the Executive Secretary's office.

Now that this indebtedness has been taken care of, the officials of the state are setting their sights on new goals, one of which is to make whatever repairs necessary to enhance the image of the Convention and make the building compatible with any of its kind. We are hopeful also of an outreach program that is conducive to building up the morals of the youth in the state, and equipping them educationally so that they will be better prepared to meet the various challenges of life. Our Cause is an on-going one, and we trust that co-operation will be forth coming whole heartedly to cause the convention under its astute leadership to take its place among the great conventions of our nation.

This year's annual session will be hosted by Bethany Baptist Church at
